Mosque developer accused of neglect

It's not just the five civil suits pending against him, which Metro revealed last week.

Sharif El-Gamal, developer of Park51, the controversial mosque two blocks from Ground Zero, also has nearly 400 open violations on a building his company owns at West 151st Street, according to the New York Post.

El-Gamal also owes the city over $60,000 in unpaid fees, fines and taxes on the uptown property.

Tenants say the 14-unit building is infested with rats and cockroachs. They also told the Post that landlord El-Gamal has ignored their complaints, ranging from a bathroom ceiling collapse to a lack of heat.

The news comes on top of a claim from Con Edison that El-Gamal owes them $1.7 million in back rent for 51 Park Place, where he wants to expand the mosque and Islamic community center.

El-Gamal is due in court this Thursday for the uptown building violations. If he doesn't show up, he reportedly risks being sent to jail.

Occupy Wall Street the top 1 percent?

NYC camp raised $480,000, which they aren't sharing with other protests ◐ Complaints circulate about how the money's being managed

As New York City's protesters enjoy gourmet dinners, down blankets and a flat-screen TV, their counterparts in other cities are left shivering — and envious.

Occupy Wall Street's New York encampment has amassed nearly half a million dollars since they first started, according to Brooklynite Pete Dutro, 36, of the organization's finance committee.

But New York protesters haven't shared one cent with other Occupy camps set up across the nation.

"We could definitely use [New York's funds]," Vernon Johnson, a volunteer at Occupy Philly, said yesterday. "What's the point of collecting money if you're not releasing it to the people you're trying to help?"

"We need money bad," agreed fellow Philadelphia protester Kate Corbett. Occupy Philly has raised $10,000.

Most of New York's money comes from individual donors, who give an average of $50 each, Dutro surmised. So far, the Wall Street camp has spent about $66,000 of that money on computers, credit card processing fees, food and medical supplies, he said.

"Most of the money is still in the bank," said Wylie Stecklow, 40, the finance group's attorney.

A material world

Donated to Zuccotti Park in the past month:

- 1,000 pairs of sneakers
- Laptop computers
- Cell phones
- 10 cases of American Apparel hoodies, jackets

And even though OWS has quite a coffer, some protesters gripe that it's not trickling down fast enough.

Last week, when drums were damaged and stolen from the drum circle, the New York General Assembly voted not to spend money to replace them.

"We've been an important part of this movement," said frustrated drummer John Eustor, 46, of Asbury Park, N.J. "I'm done with the meetings. We've just stopped giving them our donations."

Cops seek pervert stalking Queens

- 'The Laurelton rapist' attacked five since September
- Follows women walking alone at night, say police

Police are looking for a man who sexually assaulted five women in eastern Queens over the past month.

The suspect, nicknamed by residents as "the Laurelton rapist," strikes in the Queens Village, Laurelton and Springfield Gardens neighborhoods. He targets women walking alone at night.

His most recent attack was Sunday, Oct. 16. He followed a 24-year-old woman walking on Conduit Avenue at about 7 p.m. and then hit her in the back of the head, police said, causing her to fall to the ground. He then sexually assaulted her.

DCPI

▶ Look familiar?

The attacks began on Sept. 22, officials said. That night, just after 1 a.m., he followed a 44-year-old woman as she entered her home in Queens Village, and then he grabbed and sexually assaulted her.

A few weeks later, on Oct. 7, he struck again. He grabbed and sexually assaulted a woman as she entered her Queens Village apartment building.

Two days later, at 1 a.m. on Oct. 9, police say the same man approached a woman on 145th Road. He pushed her to the ground, said cops, punched her several times in the face and tried to rape her. He fled the scene after a neighbor heard his victim's cries for help.

Then, just days later, he struck again, said police, sexually assaulting a 23-year-old woman walking alone on 226th Street at South Conduit Avenue.

Cooperation needed for drug war?

One of the most prominent fighters in the war on drugs is calling for the world to get tougher. President of Colombia Juan Manuel Santos wants world leaders to take a much stronger, more coordinated approach in dealing with trafficking narcotics and the use of hard drugs such as cocaine and heroin. In an exclusive one-to-one interview with Metro, Mr. Santos says legalizing softer drugs such as cannabis could be a way forward, if done globally.

"The world needs to discuss new approaches," Santos says. "We are basically still thinking within the same framework as we have done for the last 40 years."

Colombia's war on drug cartels has made huge progress over the past 20 years. The killing of notorious drug baron Pablo Escobar in 1993 and then the arrest and conviction in 2006 of the Rodriguez Orejuela brothers, founders of the Cali Cartel, did much to dismantle the powerful cartels and spark the decline of drug-related violence that had plagued the country. Santos hopes that the world too can build on this success story.

Colombian president Juan Manuel Santos on his country's efforts in the war on drugs ◗ Santos opens up on drug legalization as a means to stop violence ◗ Says legalize soft drugs, but only if entire world agrees

COLOMBIAN LEADER: LEGALIZE MARIJUANA

Do you think legalizing softer drugs could be a way forward?
Yes, that could be an answer, provided everyone does it at the same time.

Is that something you would support?
If the entire world does it, yes.

But somebody has to take the first steps?
Yes, and it won't be me.

Why?
Because for Colombia, this is a matter of national security. Drug trafficking is what finances the violence and the irregular groups in our country. I would be crucified if I took the first step. We need to insist on more multinational actions on drug trafficking and innovate the ways we are dealing with it.

How is this different in other countries?
In other countries [Europe and the U.S.] this is mainly a health and crime issue. We need to look at all components, one of them being targeting the assets in this business. But we need to do so on a global level.

What do you think we're doing wrong?
We must discuss a new approach, looking at all the components: The profit and the crime that follows drug trafficking, the fight against money laundering, trade with arms and so on. These are all effects of drugs.

"Each country has its own potential, but together we have a massive potential."
PRESIDENT SANTOS, ON THE NEED FOR GLOBAL COOPERATION IN THE WAR ON DRUGS

What about Latin America?
We have something that the U.S. and Europe don't have: A young population and a lot of optimism. When you ask the population of a country, 'Will your children have a better life than you?' and a majority answers 'No,' then the enthusiasm of that country is limited. The latest poll in Colombia from Thursday [last week] shows that 79 percent of our population believes that we are on a great path.

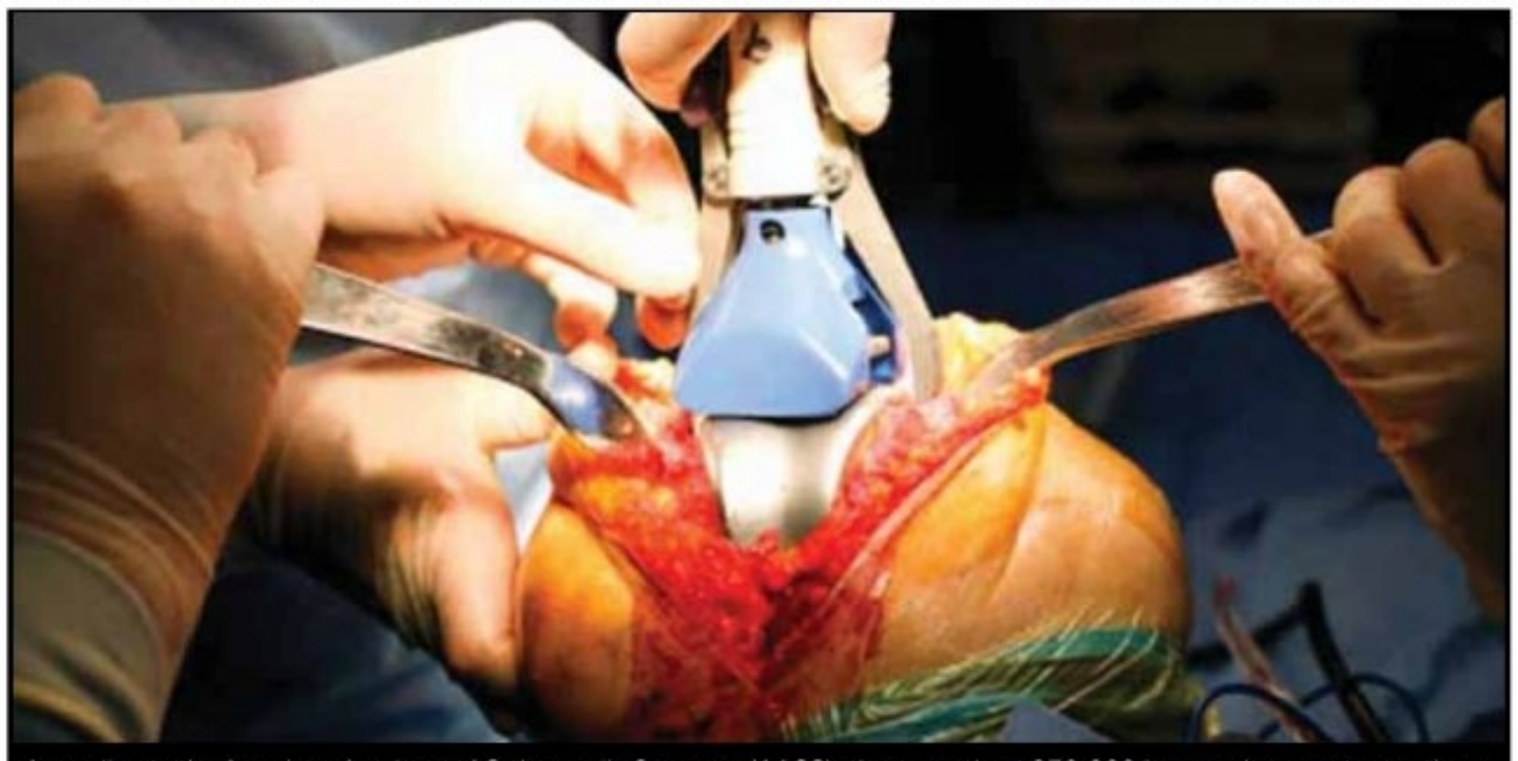
After helping countless knee pain sufferers eliminate their pain, a local doctor warns,

"If you or a loved one are scheduled for knee surgery, READ THIS ARTICLE BEFORE IT'S TOO LATE!"

A safe, non-surgical FDA cleared treatment is now locally available, proven to effectively reduce and even eliminate knee pain. The best part? It's covered by most insurances.



According to the American Academy of Orthopaedic Surgeons (AAOS), there are about 270,000 knee replacement operations performed each year in the United States. This image depicts the procedure.

Manhattan, New York:

Today, the average American lives about 30 years longer than they would have a hundred years ago. However, the age of premature wear and tear to knee joints is occurring at an alarming rate (half of all anti-inflammatory drug prescriptions written in the U.S. are for joint pain). Most patients treated are getting younger and younger. We're noticing that even busy executives have extremely active lifestyles. Between stressful deadlines, caring for families, and participating in excercise and sports, they're actually grinding their joints away. And sometimes, it goes unnoticed until it's too late.

Considering Surgery?

People who suffer from knee pain typically try supplements or pain medications before seeking help from a doctor. When all else fails and the pain is too much, some think that surgery is the only option.

However, there's good news... and you've probably never even heard of it.

A revolutionary new non-surgical treatment called Viscosupplementation Therapy is providing hope and relief for many knee pain sufferers. Offered locally by Dr. Halland Chen, M.D., this procedure is minimally invasive, requires no surgery, provides immediate results, and has little to no recovery time.

How does this therapy work?

Dr. Chen uses the newest, most advanced technology in medical equipment and years of experience to pinpoint problem areas with extreme accuracy. Viscosupplementation is then injected into the knee and bonds with naturally occurring joint fluid to create a lubricating and cushioning layer. It also reduces pain, inflammation, and swelling of the joint. Most patients compare the treatment to getting a flu shot and report little pain or discomfort.

Why have knee injections failed in the past? What's different about Dr. Chen's procedure?

Most doctors today do one of three things: 1) They perform "blind injections," an injection done without imaging guidance. 2) They use antiquated equipment from as far back as 2001, even in some of the largest hospitals in New York. 3) They use Cortisone, which can have side effects.

Precision is the difference.
Fact: 30-40% of blind injections result in needle misplacement.[1]

It's no wonder most people never experience relief!

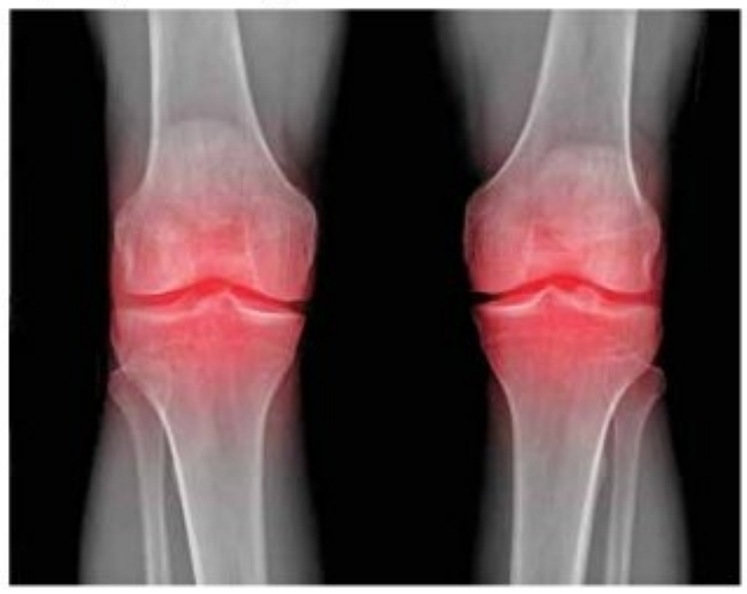
Call Manhattan Pain Management & Rehabilitation now.

(212) 346-2030

An actual Hyaluronic Acid (Hyalgan) injection performed by Dr. Halland Chen, utilizing the new 2011 Philips© C-Arm

What exactly is injected into the knee?

Hyaluronic Acid (Hyalgan) is a natural substance extracted from rooster combs and purified to mimic the lubricating substances that occur naturally in the joint, called synovial fluid. In patients with osteoarthritis, synovial fluid "dries up," allowing the cartilage of the joint to rub against itself and other surfaces. This causes pain, inflammation, and usually damage to the joint. Think of this treatment like oiling a rigid, squeaky door hinge.



When will I feel results?

Most feel an immediate reduction in pain and can return to normal activities in weeks.

Will my insurance cover this treatment?

Yes, most major insurances will pay for this treatment. We work with Aetna PPO, Blue Cross Blue Shield PPO, Cigna PPO, United Healthcare PPO, and most other PPO insurances.*

We do not participate with Medicare, Medicaid, Worker's Comp., car accident insurance, or HMO plans.

Our Aim is to Beat Most Offers!

We Strive to Beat All Legitimate Written Offers

Before Bringing your items to us, take them to other dealers. Have them give you legitimate offers in writing. Then bring your jewelry and written offers to one of our locations. Although no one can guarantee with certainty they are paying the highest price for an article at any particular time, we will strive to beat most legitimate written offers.

Why We Can Usually Pay More Than Other Dealers

Most jewelers and dealers specialize in few items and focus on newer looking items to resell. Because they are unfamiliar with many other items including vintage jewelry, old watches, coins, flatware, etc. they tend to offer very low prices because these items are not readily saleable for them. Our company has many specialized buyers for the various classifications of items that we purchase, therefore we can usually pay more.

A Note Regarding the Up To Prices listed in this Ad

The condition and rarity of an item determines its price. If an item is in excellent condition and very rare it might be worth the up to price, or even more. However, if an item is in poor condition, the value will be lower. For example, a 1927 S Quarter could be worth $7,000 in new condition or less than $20 in poor condition. The up to price reflects items of exceptional quality and rarity. Although it is unlikely you will have these items due to their extreme rarity, feel free to bring whatever items you may have and we will evaluate them free of charge.

Customer Satisfaction

Most of our business comes from satisfied customers and referrals which includes their friends and families. Our showrooms are safe and private. Our staff is courteous and professional and we strive as a company to make your selling experience a pleasant one.

Help the Environment

Using recycled precious metals for jewelry is an important way for jewelers to source precious metals more responsibly. Precious metals that have already been used in some way, including "vintage," "renewed," or "reclaimed" metals from jewelry and electronics, are not directly implicated in the destructive impacts of mining. They do not share responsibility for the impacts of mining in the same way that newly mined gold does.

Another credit downgrade on the way?

NEW YORK. The United States will likely suffer the loss of its triple-A credit rating from another major rating agency by the end of this year due to concerns over the deficit, Bank of America Merrill Lynch forecasts.

The trigger would be a likely failure by Congress to agree on a credible long-term plan to cut the U.S. deficit, the bank said in a research note published on Friday. REUTERS

Turkey shaken by strong earthquake

- Up to 1,000 may be dead in magnitude 7.2 temblor
- Survivors heard calling out for help as darkness fell

Officials fear that as many as 1,000 people were killed yesterday when a powerful earthquake hit southeast Turkey, destroying dozens of buildings and trapping some victims alive under rubble.

As night fell, survivors and emergency workers battled to pull people out of the debris in the city of Van and town of Ercis, where a student dormitory collapsed.

Residents in Van joined in a frantic search, using hands and shovels and working under floodlights and flashlights, hearing voices of survivors crying for help under mounds of shattered concrete in pitch darkness and bitter cold.

REUTERS

"We heard cries and groaning from underneath the debris, we are waiting for the rescue teams to arrive," Halil Celik told Reuters as he stood beside the ruins of building that had collapsed before his eyes.

"All of a sudden, a quake tore down the building in front of me. All the bystanders, we all ran to the building and rescued two injured people from the ruins."

At another site, three teenagers may still be trapped under a collapsed building. People clambered over the masonry, shouting: "Is there anyone there?"

Turkey's Kandilli Observatory and Earthquake Research Institute said the magnitude 7.2 earthquake was three miles deep. It was among the strongest in Turkish history and the worst since 1999. REUTERS

THE WORD

Metro's Monica Weymouth shares her take on the world of gossip @monicaatmetro monica.weymouth@metro.us

– Dorothy Robinson will return on Tuesday

This weekend in Lohans

This hurts us more than it hurts you, but as a gossip column, we are obligated to dedicate this space to Lindsay Lohan and her adventures in community service over the weekend. (Don't like it? Get us a pic of Bradley Cooper and Jennifer Lopez together, and maybe we can talk.)

Here's the good news: Not only did Lindsay show up at the morgue, but she was sociable and cleaned floors on her hands and knees, reports TMZ. And although the L.A. county coroner rejected her peace offering (and/or bribe) of cupcakes and burgers, we thought the delivery was a nice gesture.

Now, for the bad news: Dina Lohan is reportedly shopping around a tell-all book about her daughter's struggles with addiction, and father Michael Lohan gladly took the opportunity to complain about them both in a lengthy, unhinged rant to RadarOnline, in which he compared himself to an archangel.

In other words? This chick is going to be headlining every gossip column for the next 20 years, and we collectively owe her apology cupcakes.

▶ Lindsay, as soon as you surface in a more flattering outfit and some better blush, we'll use those photos. Promise.

PHOTOS: GETTY IMAGES

But they were on a break!

The Black Eyed Peas aren't calling it quits as some rumors suggested, but Fergie does admit the group is on hiatus. "A break is not a breakup — you gotta watch 'Friends,'" the Queen Pea told TMZ cameras.

We somehow doubt will.i.am is well-versed in the Ross and Rachel saga, so we'll spell it out for him: It's a trap, and we bet Fergie would look behind that door.

Sheen: 'People aren't stupid'

The more Ashton Kutcher denies cheating on wife Demi Moore in rambling Web videos, the more sane and professional Charlie Sheen seems. Sheen says he has no hard feelings about Kutcher, who replaced him on "Two and a Half Men," but he's not surprised ratings for the show have gone down. "He's doing the best he can. I don't think the role is cursed, but I'm extremely disappointed with how they're handling what I left behind," Sheen tells TMZ. "People aren't stupid, you know. Not all of them."

Sheen

Talking points

Cooper and JLO a go?

Bradley Cooper has reportedly been going to great lengths to woo Jennifer Lopez now that she's split from husband Marc Anthony, according to Us Weekly. Cooper "has been after Jennifer, calling her, for ages," a source says, adding that Lopez "has been trying to concentrate on her kids and work. But Bradley has been especially eager." It's apparently working, as Lopez has decided to "let him in," the source says. "She likes the thrill and the fact that Bradley has been pursuing her."

▶ Lively and Reynolds have been seen together in Boston.

Blake sleeping over at Ryan's

The rumored romance between Blake Lively and Ryan Reynolds appears to be going strong, as the "Gossip Girl" star spent her third weekend in a row in Boston with her "Green Lantern" co-star, according to Us Weekly. The pair were spotted making a pre-dawn exit from Reynolds' Boston apartment this weekend, his dogs in tow. "They're seeing each other casually," a source previously said. "Now they're both single and trying it out."

Justin, Jessica: Round 18

If the former couple is quietly getting back together, Justin Timberlake and Jessica Biel are getting worse at keeping it a secret. Witnesses spotted the pair getting cozy at the after-party for Timberlake's "In Time" premiere, according to Hollyscoop. "[They] became more and more affectionate, sneaking kisses, whispering to each other, and sharing quick back rubs and caresses," a source says. "She pretended to punch him a couple times and he gamely bounced up and down like a jack-in-the-box."

Here are a few of the things we couldn't help but notice at the College Music Journal's Music Marathon last week Who you'll be hearing soon

PAT HEALY
HEIDI PATALANO
BRAYDEN SIMMS

BYOL

Bringing your own lights is an effective move that makes you stand out from the thousand other bands. You can better capture what you know as the essence of your own music. Weekend brought three long red tube lights to put beside their instruments, evoking electric heaters, warming up their icy goth rock sound. Dance rock band Small Black rely on the chain of lights around Josh Kolenik's sampling console. It casts a nice beam on the singer as he dances tirelessly throughout the set. Purity Ring have a light within their giant bass drum, illuminating the stage when singer Megan James bangs on it. She also holds a lantern, like the hermit from that Led Zeppelin logo, while bandmate Corrin Roddick plays a weird, pipe-like apparatus with little glowing bulbs on the ends.

Metal is for hipsters

Out of all the "this isn't cool right now, so let's make it cool again" things that those pretty hipsters have gotten their hands on, heavy metal might be the most surprising. But hey, it's the last frontier of irony. While band members like those of The F—ing Wrath still look like your typical metal band — Rob Zombie T-shirts and all — their audience is changing (at least in the Big Apple) to look like models from the American Apparel catalogue.

Interpol and Sigur Ros renaissance

There was a saying about the Velvet Underground that while not everybody bought their album, everybody who did buy it started a band. The same may not quite hold true for the Icelandic band Sigur Ros, but it certainly did seem like a lot of acts were channeling that ethereal ahhh-ing. These sounds came from Weekend, who combine Sigur Ros-isms with driving rock arrangements. The Minnesota band Polica also summoned the angelic Norse sound while adding a touch of autotune and a two-drum assault. The trio Active Child combine their take on the Germanic sound with harps and R&B. Yes, harps and R&B!

Another interesting influence seemed to be Interpol. When that band hit the scene in 2002, every music journo labeled them Joy Division sycophants. But now, young bands like Wild Palms and The Denzels are taking a page out of their more recent predecessor's playbook with reverb-heavy, jangly guitars and occasional outbursts of wild emotion.

CMJ MVPs

Our faves

As for our favorite acts of the music-filled weekend, it's a three-way tie between GIVERS, Totally Enormous Extinct Dinosaurs and the aforementioned Wild Palms. GIVERS' sheer energy is a true joy. Tiffany Lamson wails on the drums in between playing ukulele, glockenspiel and singing her heart out. All bands with a second drummer in the front of the stage should have to be as good as she is.

Totally Enormous Extinct Dinosaurs is the stage name of British house DJ Orlando Higginbottom, who wore a bodacious stegosaurus getup with neon dorsal spikes bouncing to his driving beats. He owned the stage, looping fuzzed-out vocals and jumping back and forth between laptop, keyboard and samplers.

Le Bon finds himself in the ordinary world

LE BON ON CREATING THE PERFECT SET LIST

Though Simon Le Bon sings that "wild boys never lose it," the Duran Duran singer experienced a huge physical setback when he blew out his voice during a concert earlier this summer.

"I really did lose my top range — a whole octave of my range — for about two months," he says. "The doctors were never able to give me a definitive diagnosis of what had occurred."

Le Bon went on vocal rest and worked with his bandmates to rejigger their set so that when the singer was ready to perform again, the songs would ramp up from mellower material into the frenetic tunes for which they've always been known.

"After seven shows, I'm starting to feel like I'm getting back to invincible again," says the 52-year-old artist.

Although there is an air of humor in this statement, there is also an air of truth. For a band whose sound so defined the 1980s, Duran Duran somehow escape being defined by that decade. For their most recent offering, last year's "All You Need Is Now," they worked with producer Mark Ronson and achieved a sound that honors their legacy while showing a keen awareness of where music is today.

"I think we're very lucky that we've had numerous hits: 'Hungry Like the Wolf,' 'Rio,' 'The Reflex.' When you have so many of them, it's difficult for any one song to enslave you," he says. "We could very easily go out and play a greatest hits show, but we're very conscious of the fact that to keep our excitement alive in the band, we need to make new albums, we need to make new songs and we need to play them to people."

Marie Claire goes to work

The magazine launches its career-focused supplement tomorrow
Editor-in-Chief Joanna Coles on her sweet job

From your best friend to your yoga teacher to that colleague who's been eyeing your office for months, there's no shortage of people out there happy to offer advice on how to be a "better" woman in the workplace. So why did we take a second look at Marie Claire @ Work?

For one, we're human and respond very well to catchy cover lines like "57 Secrets from Successful Women." Additionally, the special supplement is headed up by Marie Claire Editor-in-Chief Joanna Coles — a woman who not only loves her high-profile job, but is still passionate about the industry she knew she wanted to work in since middle school. How many of your friends can you say that about?

We caught up with Coles for some insight into her own career — and, sure, maybe a little reassurance about this whole print media thing.

▶ Joanna Coles helms Marie Claire.

When did you know that you wanted to work in print media?

I got my first article published when I was 10, in the community newspaper. When I realized I was getting paid for it, I knew it was the career for me. I just wanted to support myself doing something I loved.

When did you discover the magazine industry?

When I was 11, I did my own magazine that I delivered to the neighbors. I would photocopy it and drop it off to all the people on the street. I actually sent it to the Queen of England, and I got a letter back from her lady-in-waiting. I'm sure she didn't actually read it, but it did very much inspire me.

What advice would you give to an 11-year-old today who wanted to edit Marie Claire?

I would tell them to read and look at all the best magazines you can find. My favorite thing is to spend time in European newsagents just picking up every magazine. I love European fashion magazines, and what's coming out of the Far East now is incredible.

Would you include warnings about the future of print?

I think women love magazines and will always love magazines. You know that dreadful first 30 minutes when you're on the plane and they say "switch off your electronics"? There will always be a need for gorgeous, beautifully done magazines.

Career advice

Mentoring for success

Effective mentoring is a key element when it comes to both attracting and retaining great employees, says Harvard Business Review.

Here are three types of mentoring you should consider, as adapted from "Keeping Great People with Three Kinds of Mentors," by Anthony Tjan.

Buddy or peer mentors: In the early stages of a person's career, a "buddy" can help speed up the learning curve. This relationship helps the protege understand how things work at the organization.

Career mentors: After the initial period at a workplace, employees need to have a senior manager serve as a career advisor and advocate.

Life mentors: A life mentor serves as a periodic sounding board. Organizations can't necessarily offer a life mentor, but they can encourage seeing one. REUTERS

The real value of internships

Internships are mandatory for job search success, regardless of industry or profession. Without internship experience, you're seen as a risk to companies that are looking to hire graduates that have already put their education to use. A study by Aerotek, a leading staffing provider, reports that 57 percent of adults would recommend an internship to make getting a post-graduate job easier. Furthermore, 55 percent of those who held internships found their current job through networking. Getting your first internship will be the most challenging, because employers will be looking for a track record. Here are some tricks to scoring your first — or next — internship:

Advice

DAN SCHAWBEL
PERSONALBRANDINGBLOG.COM

Use your current network

Your best chance at landing an internship is to ask your family and friends to hire you or to refer you to someone else. When you ask them for help, make sure you're specific with the type of field you want to go into — and don't be picky if it's paid or unpaid. The most important thing you can do now is to get some experience under your belt. Your family and friends are your trusted allies and can help you open doors.

Tap into your college career center

Most students ignore their career centers, which are there to support internship searches. As long as you're a student with good standing, advisors will be willing to help you by introducing you to alumni. Reach out to them to schedule an appointment and then inquire about any alumni that would be interested in meeting.

LIFESIZE

▶ Internships provide real-world experience that will be priceless when you start your job search.

Connect with people online

I recommend that you search for industry-leading professionals that you revere and reach out to them personally to ask if you can do work for them. Instead of asking for money, ask for an opportunity to contribute to whatever project they're working on. Your effort, and attitude, might turn into an internship. And if it doesn't, keep contacting new people. You can also search postings at sites such as Internships.com and Collegerecruiter.com.

Facebook: Maybe not so bad for your grades

While you can waste a ton of time looking through last weekend's party photos, the site can also be a valuable tool for sharing information

PHOTOS.COM

▶ Depending on how you're using it, Facebook may not be the worst way to kill a little time between classes.

Updating your status, "liking" your friends' photos and sharing videos don't really seem like activities that are all that academic. Time spent social networking could certainly be used for studying. However, a new study shows that spending time on Facebook might not be the culprit for suffering GPAs — but that depends on what exactly you're doing on Facebook.

The study, called "Too much face and not enough books: The relationship between multiple indices of Facebook use and academic performance," looked at the social networking habits of 1,839 undergraduate students. On average, participants spent about 106 minutes per day on Facebook and logged on about six different times. This study looked specifically at what students were doing on Facebook. The three most popular activities were viewing photos, commenting on content and checking to see what someone was up to.

Reynol Junco, a professor at Lockhaven University and the study's author, found that while some activities on Facebook may negatively impact grades (including the site's chat option and posting status updates), others — such as sharing links and information — have the opposite effect.

Ultimately, the study found that Facebook can be as much of an intellectual tool as it is a means for keeping in touch. Junco suggests professors seize the opportunity to engage students academically through Facebook by using it to communicate about course content, create groups for classes and share news links with students.

"By identifying and exploring the relationship between individual Facebook activities and student learning behaviors, educators might transform activities currently related to poorer outcomes into beneficial academic experiences," Junco wrote.

Rhode Island gives hope to immigration advocates

By allowing undocumented immigrants to pay in-state college tuition rates, the state has made a loud statement in a national debate

On Sept. 27, the Rhode Island Board of Governors for Higher Education voted unanimously to allow undocumented immigrants to pay in-state tuition rates if they graduate from a R.I. high school.

Combined with a similar decision last year by the California Supreme Court, the R.I. policy has bolstered the spirits of immigrant advocates on college campuses as they anxiously await similar decisive moments in states like Colorado and Iowa.

"The [U.S.] Supreme Court has already ruled that you can't hold children accountable for breaking immigration laws when it comes to education," says Ryan Gildersleeve, director of the Center for K-16 Education Policy and Research at the University of Texas. "So to treat them as criminals instead of students because they reached this arbitrary age of 18 doesn't make a lot of common sense for anybody."

COMSTOCK

▶ In Rhode Island, all of these students would be eligible to pay in-state college tuition rates after graduating from high school.

According to the Pew Hispanic Center, somewhere between 65,000 and 85,000 undocumented students graduate from U.S. high schools every year.

"When I traveled to Rhode Island, I tried to impress upon them that they had already invested in the schooling of these children," says Dr. William Perez, who recently spoke at Brown University about his latest book, "Undocumented Latino College Students: Their Socioemotional and Academic Experiences."

"It's just not a good return on that investment to leave these kids in limbo."

BRUCE WALSH
bruce.walsh@metro.us

A nationwide conversation

Advocates for immigrant students are quick to point out research by Stella Flores and Michael Olivas in the Journal of Higher Education. Both have published studies showing that extending in-state tuition to undocumented students vastly increases their college participation, without a negative impact on local tax bases. "This is part of growing nationwide conversation," says Gildersleeve. "It's very clear that increasing educational opportunities in communities leads to lower rates of poverty in those communities, lower crime rates, stronger economies, public health and participation in democratic institutions."

Demands: Yes or no?

The Occupy protesters are under no obligation to provide a list of demands. They are bringing attention to the issues. They may not know the solutions, but they have certainly highlighted the problems — and I thank them for it.
MARY FARRELL, VIA E-MAIL

Even my friends who are police officers fully support OWS. America is now second fiddle to Communist China, so it's not like the right-wingers can say they think Bush did a good job. And considering Obama has continued 99 percent of Bush's policies, you can't criticize Obama unless you're also attacking Bush. My only gripe with OWS is that I want to see them put out a concrete list of demands.
PENNY RITZ, BROOKLYN

Obama hates America?

I believe that Obama will be the last president elected whose parents hated America. It is becoming obvious to the majority of people that our hive has been compromised by a very clever passive-aggressive who has surrounded himself mostly with people whose sole mission is taking this nation down to the point of no return. Is it even surprising that Obama attempts to compare the Tea Party people with the Occupy Wall Street mob whose theme is "eat the rich"?
JOSEPH DUPONT, VIA E-MAIL

Politicians are the problem

I support the OWS protestors. I wish I was younger; I would have joined them. But I would like to see some placards that read: "Too much government." Politicians are supposed to serve the people, and we elect them based on their campaign speeches. However, as soon as they get elected it is business as usual. Most of them become corrupt and enact laws that rob the middle class.
B. N. SHARMA, SOUTH OZONE PARK

Protests really lighting a fire

What the OWS movement forgets is that the Arab Spring only ignited when Mohamed Bouazizi touched a match to his gasoline-soaked body and did the same. If they're really that fed up with their place in our ordered society, and really that cold and uncomfortable out there, then I think I have a two-birds-one-stone idea for them.
MICHAEL T. MCGOVERN, JERSEY CITY

JETS 27 | CHARGERS 21 Up next: Bye Nov. 6: at Buffalo

▶ The much-maligned Plaxico Burress exploded for three touchdown catches after hearing criticism all week.

PLAX IS BACK

Burress breaks out for three touchdowns Jets rally for 17 unanswered points to beat the Bolts Team riding high heading into their bye week

Rex Ryan might've been right that four years ago the Chargers could have given him a chance at the Super Bowl, but in yesterday's 27-21 win, the Jets proved his current team gives the Jets' head coach a shot at winning one now.

"I think this was our team, the one we kind of envisioned at the start of the season," Ryan said.

A disappointing season has perhaps unfolded after two-straight wins.

The Jets overcame a 14-3 deficit thanks to three Plaxico Burress touchdowns to get the win against a Chargers team that came into the game 4-1 and favored.

"This is huge going into the bye, winning two straight, continuing to stay undefeated at home," running back LaDainian Tomlinson said. "We plan on going undefeated at home, winning all the home games and winning a few on the road. We've stayed true to form."

Three things

1 Gang Greene: Running back Shonn Greene came into the game struggling — averaging 3.4 yards per carry. But Greene stepped up, rattling off several long runs while being a consistent presence in moving the chains. There wasn't a touchdown, but he had 112 yards on 20 carries.

2 Stranded: With 10:56 left in the fourth quarter, the Chargers had a manageable third down when Vincent Jackson bobbled a pass that was picked by Darrelle Revis and returned 64 yards to San Diego's 17-yard line. The play swung momentum to the Jets for the first time.

3 Keller loses grip: The game started about as poorly as possible. Before the Chargers' offense even touched the ball they led 7-0. Dustin Kelller had the ball stripped by Donald Butler and returned 37 yards for a touchdown. METRO/KD

After struggling all year to convert on third downs, the Jets were 8-of-13 (62 percent) yesterday. They were at 34.6 before Sunday.

3

Defensive end Aaron Maybin picked up his third sack of the season. He's played well after Buffalo left him on the scrap heap.

Burress finally clicks

CHRIS TROTMAN/GETTY IMAGES

▶ Burress scores over Antoine Cason yesterday.

He went from person of interest to persona non grata and now, after his Week 7 performance for the Jets, Plaxico Burress is now the person of the hour.

Burress hauled in three touchdowns in yesterday's win, lifting the Jets to a comeback win. All three of his touchdowns came in the red zone, the combined distance totaling just 10 yards. All told, Burress had four catches for 25 yards, but it was those three tosses into the end zone that made the difference. It is a rise in form for Burress, who had just one catch last week in the Monday night win over Miami.

"Every morning that you wake up on Sunday, you want to be great. Some of the situations that were happening, I would just say to myself 'Just let the game come to me' — just trying to be patient," Burress said. "I was forcing it a little bit. The coaches have been calling the plays and I hadn't been getting the results for them."

Coming into Sunday, he had just 14 catches and two touchdowns. He struggled with an ankle injury during preseason and never seemed to acclimate to the offense.

"I said 'Hey, there is going to come a time in the game where these things are going to click,'" Burress said. "And today, we just had a great day."

DT Ellis injures ankle

Just when it looked like everyone was healthy again.

Rookie defensive lineman Kenrick Ellis, who performed well in his first career game last week against Miami, left yesterday's game in the first quarter with an ankle injury. It was his first career start.

He did not return and his status going forward is unknown.

One good thing is that the Jets have their bye this week, so Ellis will be afforded extra time to recover. METRO

NFL by the numbers

2:44

Tim Tebow led the Broncos to two touchdowns —and a two-point conversion — in the final 2:44 minutes of yesterday's game to force overtime. Matt Prater kicked a 52-yard field goal to win.

253

Felix Jones who? Dallas fans aren't usually in the position of rooting for Oklahoma players, but former Sooner DeMarco Murray busted out for 253 yards rushing and a touchdown. He also had a 91-yard run in the Cowboys' 34-7 drubbing of the 0-6 St. Louis Rams.

17:04

Seattle's time of possession was one of their many ugly stats in their 6-3 loss to the Browns yesterday.

116

New Oakland Raiders quarterback Carson Palmer threw for 116 yards on 8-for-21 passing. He was inserted in the third quarter after starter Kyle Boller threw three interceptions. Problem: Palmer threw three interceptions of his own in the Raiders' 28-0 loss to Kansas City.

2 Denver 18, Miami 15 (OT): All hail Tebow. The Denver QB scored two late TDs to rally the Broncos over Miami.

3 Carolina 33, Washington 20: Cam Newton (18-of-23, 256 yards, 2 total TDs) is becoming a real star in the NFL.

4 Cleveland 6, Seattle 3: We have our winner for worst game of the year. Seattle had 137 total yards.

5 Houston 41, Tennessee 7: Arian Foster had the fantasy line of the day — 234 total yards and three touchdowns.

6 Chicago 24, Tampa Bay 18: Matt Forte and the Bears went across the pond to get their second-straight win.
